

Healing Traumatic Attachment Injuries and Preventing Relapse in Couples Therapy

Price: $65.00

Description

"Creating lasting change in couples therapy is a crucial clinical goal. Yet a significant relapse rate in couples therapy remains a serious problem affecting our field today. Trauma intensifies the need for secure attachments, yet often simultaneously, destroys one's ability to trust such bonds. This conference brings together key contributors to new insights about healing traumatic attachments and preventing relapse in couples therapy. These three distinguished clinician/researchers will offer stimulating presentations and dialogue from an attachment-focused, interpersonal, and neurobiological view of adult love -focusing on the issues of trauma and creating sustained change in couples therapy. Presenters will consider ways in which therapists can utilize current research developments to promote healthy connections between partners. {module [212]}"
